Market Review

Emerging market (EM) equities started the second quarter off strong, before making a steep correction, and then rebounding back at the end of June, finishing the quarter up 74 basis points. The asset class finished the first half of the year up 10.76%. The pullback in May was due to the escalation in trade tensions between the US and China, as the US increased tariffs on US$200 billion of Chinese exports from 10% to 25%. After a sharp initial reaction, the market proved resilient and began to climb back into positive territory. The rebound was driven by a dovish wave of central bank commentary — led by the US Fed, the European Central Bank, and the Bank of Japan — and expectations for US-China trade progress at the June G-20 meetings in Japan. A temporary truce was reached when President Trump and President Xi met at the G-20 summit. The US agreed not to impose additional tariffs while trade negotiations continue.

US-China relations remain key for global market sentiment. We expect China and the US to continue to work towards a trade deal, and the Chinese government to roll out further measures to support the domestic economy. China's macro activity data remained relatively soft. China's manufacturing PMI was weaker than expected in June. In the near term, corporate sentiment may be weighed down by slowing industrial profit growth and persistent US-China trade tensions. However, retail sales came in above expectations. Retail sales growth rebounded to as non-auto categories improved.

In India, Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) won re-election. In Modi's second term, the main areas of focus will likely be on reviving growth, including labor-enhancing reforms, lifting the investment cycle and boosting domestic manufacturing. On the macro front, India's core inflation, which excludes food and energy, continues to decline. The Reserve Bank of India cut rates three times this year due to weaker domestic growth and lingering external risks.

In the ASEAN region, consumption indicators in the Philippines have seen an uptick. Household debt to GDP is very low at 9.5% and this should provide substantial headroom for growth. On the fiscal front, infrastructure spending has risen, led by the "Build, Build, Build" program, but further pickup will likely be dependent on policymakers lifting revenue via tax reforms. In Indonesia, with President Jokowi's re-election now past, the government should shift back towards policy implementation, with a focus on industrialization and infrastructure development.

The Latin American and EEMEA (Eastern Europe, Middle East & Africa) regions both rallied in the second quarter. Argentina, Russia, and Greece were three of the best performing countries in the quarter. Argentina rallied off a low base and more centrist-than-expected coalitions from this fall's presidential candidates. Russia continued to benefit from signs of improved corporate governance of benchmark juggernauts along with dissipating risk of additional sanctions after the release of the Mueller report. Greece was up ahead of presidential elections, where the market-friendly party, New Democracy, is expected to perform well. Chile, Hungary, and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) were the worst performing countries during the quarter. Chile, which has roughly 50% of its exports in copper, fell due to volatile growth expectations from China and also from congressional headwinds to President Pinera's key reform proposals. Hungary declined from spillover volatility coming out of the European Union and the UAE moved lower with oil prices and regional geopolitical tension. Overall, companies across Latin America and EEMEA should benefit from higher commodity prices and remain attractive with valuation multiples below historic averages.

Last, during the quarter, MSCI welcomed both Saudi Arabia and Argentina into the EM index, taking the number of countries in the index up to 26.

Fund Review

Mirae Asset's Emerging Markets Fund (MILGX) gained 2.73% whereas the MSCI Emerging Markets Index returned 0.61% for the quarter ending June 30, 2019.

Key Contributors to Performance

■ On a sector basis, Industrials and Financials contributed the most to the Fund's relative performance due mainly to strong stock selection.

■ With regards to geography, the top contributor to relative performance was China as a result of both strong stock selection and allocation effects. India also had a positive impact due mainly to stock selection. However, it is instructive to keep in mind that the portfolio's country weightings are a function of bottom-up stock selection rather than targeted allocations to particular countries.

■ On the stock level, the top contributors to the Fund's relative performance during the quarter were Shanghai International Airport, SBI Life Insurance and Companhia de Locacao das Americas.

Key Detractors from Performance

■ On a sector basis, the largest detractor from relative performance was Materials mainly due to stock selection. Stock selection and allocation effects in Utilities also had a negative impact on performance.

■ Relating to geography, Vietnam and Argentina detracted the most from performance due to allocation effects.

■ On the stock level, the biggest detractors were Suzano, Lemon Tree Hotels, and the lack of exposure to Public Joint-Stock Company Gazprom.

Outlook

The continued resilience of the asset class underlines our thesis that we are in the midst of a multi-year EM bull market and that 2018 underperformance came from idiosyncratic drivers, which created an attractive opportunity to invest in mispriced securities. The Fed's pivot to easier monetary policy has also led to expectations for a weaker US dollar in the second half of the year. We also saw more dovish stances from Russia and Brazil amongst others.

US-China trade issues remain a key downside risk to markets and we expect volatility to persist in the near term. However, we are of the view that the US and China will work towards reaching a trade deal. We believe that a deal will be struck when one or both sides begin to feel the full impact of tariffs on the real economy. A longer standoff is likely if the US Fed is very responsive in terms of policy. Despite macro uncertainty, we continue to see pockets of opportunity in EM.

While we believe that the current environment provides support for EM equities, we continue to focus on more predictable and enduring investment drivers, such as structural stories, proven business models, and strong management teams. Our Emerging Markets investment strategy continues to be driven by fundamental, bottom-up stock selection. We look to invest in high-quality companies with structural advantages that benefit from broad growth across emerging markets. We maintain the view that over the long-run, share prices reflect company earnings and aim to take advantage of market dislocations.
